

The situation of women and girls in times of war and peace

Haiti

The situation of women and girls in times of war and peace

The following photos were taken from Haitian media sites and well-known online media such as Ayibopost, Le Nouvelliste, L'Express, GettyImages, etc.

Haiti

Gangs rule Haiti and spread terror among the population.

Gangs rule Haiti and spread terror among the population.

In the camps for displaced persons, citizens, including women and girls, live in utter indignity.

Hospitals, affected by the security situation, are deserted by the population, including women and girls

Hospitals, affected by the security situation, are deserted by the population, including women and girls

The environment of those who live in denial of their rights is unhealthy.

The city center of the capital has been abandoned and converted into a garbage dump.

Areas have been emptied of their populations who have fled the violence of armed gangs.

Areas have been emptied of their populations who have fled the violence of armed gangs.

Areas have been emptied of their populations who have fled the violence of armed gangs.

- These photos don't show everything I wanted to share with you.
- I chose not to show you photos of survivors of the sexual and gender-based violence.
- However, I hope these images have shown you how the Haitian state allowed the situation to deteriorate until it spiraled completely out of control.
- In this context of systematic human rights violations, Haitian women and girls don't live. We survive.